

Basaltic Prisms

Hidden within the rugged landscapes of Los Comondú, the Basaltic Prisms are one of Baja California Sur's most remarkable geological formations. Towering volcanic rock columns, shaped by the slow cooling of ancient lava flows, rise above the desert landscape, offering visitors a rare opportunity to explore one of the peninsula's lesser-known natural wonders. Combined with the nearby oasis communities, the site provides an unforgettable blend of geology, nature, and cultural heritage.
